History of Joint Base Andrews

Joint Base Andrews' origins date back to the Civil War, when the Union occupied a small country church as headquarters for soldiers camped nearby. Today, that church is known as Chapel Two, and the base community still uses it for worship services.

The present site of Andrews was often discussed in the early part of the 29th century as a potential civilian airfield. In August 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the Secretary of War to acquire the land and build a military airfield. Construction began later that year. April 19, 1943, the first permanent unit, the 463rd Base Headquarters and Air Base Squadron, arrived from Westover Field, MA, with 105 enlisted men and five officers.

Camp Springs army Air Field became operational May 2, 1943, when the first Republic P-47 Thunderbolt arrived; 75 other p-47s arrived that first month. The field's early mission was to train fighter pilots for overseas combat duty.

Camp Springs became Andrews Field May 2, 1945 to honor one of the Air Force's founding fathers, Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews.

Shortly after the Air Force became a separate service in 1947, the base's name changed to Andrews Air Force Base.

After WW II, Andrews served as headquarters for Continental Air Command, Strategic Air Command and the Military Air Transport Service, It was also headquarters to the Air Research and Development Command and its successor, the Air Force Systems Command, from 1950 to 1992.

The first permanently assigned jet-powered aircraft, an F-80 Shooting Star, arrived at Andrews in 1947. With the onset of the Korean War in June 1950, Andrews became involved in combat readiness training for B-25 medium bomber crews.

However, almost since its establishment, Andrews has been known for its Special Air Missions - the transportation of senior government and military leaders. President Harry S. Truman was the first to fly a presidential flight out of Andrews, November 24, 1946. In 1959, Detachment 1, 1254th Air Transport Group received its first jet aircraft, a VC-137. While the president's official aircraft, C-121, Columbine III, remained at Washington National in March 1962, and Andrews officially became "Home of Air Force One". In 1963, the Naval Air Facility moved to Andrews and is currently headquartered on the east side of the base.

Andrews has served as a solemn backdrop for national tragedy. After the November 22, 1963 assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas, the president's body arrived at Andrews later that evening, accompanied by his widow Jacqueline B. Kennedy and newly sworn in President Lyndon D. Johnson. Thousands of mourners jammed the air terminal, including one of the largest gatherings of news media representatives ever assembled at any time on Andrews.

Andrews has also been the scene of many joyful returns and reunions. Among the many occasions, Andrews welcomed the first prisoners of war back from Vietnam in 1973, saw the return of US hostages from Iran in 1981, and welcomed former POW Army Private First Class Jessica Lynch home from Iraq in 2003.

The 89th Airlift Wing became the host unit for Andrews in 1991, continuing Andrews' rich history as the elite Air Mobility Command wing for transporting VIPs around the world. Andrews routinely provides service for America's senior officials as well as king, queens, presidents, prime ministers and military leaders from foreign nations.

In June 2004, the world watched as the remains of former President Ronald Regan arrived at Andrews for the state funeral services in Washington, DC. A few days later, thousands of mourners paid their respects on Andrews' flight line as President Regan's body departed for California.

In June 2006, the 316th Wing, under the Air Force District of Washington, became the host unit of Andrews.

On October 1, 2009, Andrews Air Force Base joined Naval Air Facility Washington to become Joint Base Andrews Naval Air Facility Washington, or Joint Base Andrews.

In October 2010, the 316th Wing was inactivated and the 11th Wing, formerly the host wing at Bolling Air Force Base, was re-designated the host wing here at Andrews. The "Chief's Own" 11th Wing, while adopting the missions of Andrews, continues to oversee all operations of the Air Force Band, Honor Guard, and Chaplaincy, which are still located at Joint Base Anacostia/Bolling. The 11th Wing is proud to be host of the base bearing the name of one of the true founding fathers of today's most powerful air, space and cyberspace force.

Andrews today is also home to the Air Force District of Washington headquarters, the Air mobility Command's 89 AW, the 79th Medical Wing, the District of Columbia Air National Guard's 113th Wing, the Air Force Reserves' 459th Air Refueling Wing and several other partner units. Andrews has evolved from the muddy fields and wooden buildings of the 1940s to become one of the most modern air bases, and solidify itself as "The Gateway to the Nation's Capital".

Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews

General Andrews was a significant figure in the early days of the Army Air Corps. He was often called "Marshall's Airman," referring to General of the Army George C. Marshall, who was the Army chief of staff. General Andrews was General Marshall's main advisor concerning aviation matters. Although General Andrews died in 1943, his influence with General Marshall and other senior military leaders played a pivotal role toward the ultimate establishment of a separate and independent Air Force in 1947.

General Andrews was born in Nashville, TN, Feb 3, 1884. In 1906, he graduated from the US Military Academy at West Point, NY, and received a second lieutenant commission in the cavalry. He served his first 11 years in the Philippines, Hawaii and other posts in the United States. Shortly after the US entered WWI in 1917, General Andrews was transferred to the Signal Corps for duty with the Aviation Division.

The future general earned his wings in 1918, and then held a number of Air Service and Air Corps staff and command billets. General Andrews worked in the War Plans Division of the War Department General Staff before transferring to Europe in August 1920. There, he served as Air Service officer, American Forces in Germany. Later, General

Andrews took over as assistant officer in charge of Civil Affairs, Headquarters American Forces in Germany. He returned to Washington, DC in early 1923, for duty in the office of the Chief of Air Service.

In 1933, General Andrews assumed command of the famed 1st Pursuit Group at Selfridge Field, MI. In 1934, he reported for special duty in Washington to help prepare plans for consolidating all air combat units under a prototype "Air Force", co-equal with the Air Corps, which directed all non-combat air functions. That prototype became General Headquarters, and March 1, 1935, General Andrews became the commanding general- with a temporary rank of brigadier general- of the newly established GHQ Air Force at Langley Field VA. While there, he was instrumental in the development of a modern bomber force. He earned the temporary grade of major general, but General Andrews' persistence to purchase large numbers of the B-17 lost him favor with senior military leaders. In early 1939, he reverted back to the permanent rank of colonel and was sent to Fort Sam Houston, TX, as air officer of the Eighth Corps Area.

In July 1939, General Marshall became acting Chief of Staff of the Army. He summoned General Andrews back to Washington, appointing him Assistant Chief of Staff for Training and Operations and promoting him to the permanent grade of brigadier general. It was the first time in military history that an Airman was appointed as one of the four assistant chiefs of staff on the Army General Staff.

In November 1940, General Andrews assumed command of the newly established Panama Canal Air Force, and later, the Caribbean Defense Command. He arrived in Cairo, Egypt, to assume command of the Army in the Middle East in 1942. At the Casablanca Conference in January 1943, Allied Forces leaders determined time had come to establish a separate European Theater of Operations. General Marshall proposed that General Andrews command it.

In February 1943, General Andrews assumed command of US Forces in the European Theater of Operations. A few months later, on May 3, 1943, he died in an aircraft accident off the coast of Iceland. General Marshall delivered the eulogy at a memorial service in Washington, saying that Frank Andrews was one of the Army's few great captains.

March 31, 1945, Mrs. Jeanette "Johnny" Andrews visited Camp Springs Army Air Field, MD, for the dedication ceremony to rename the installation Andrews Field in honor of her late husband. When the Air Force finally became a separate service on September 18, 1947, as General Andrews had so long advocated for, the base was assumed the designation -- Andrews Air Force Base.
